Reading is the basis for learning and school success. While reading is learned primarily in the classroom, many students need extra time and help. Research shows that tutoring is a great way for individuals and groups outside school to support learning. Effective tutoring requires appropriate training and careful planning. This brochure presents some basic tips for reading tutors.

Tips for Reading Tutors

Be positive.

- Praise goes a long way with learners who struggle in reading. Provide positive feedback when correct responses are made (“Great! The word is Sequoia.”). Try not to use the word “no.”

Be attentive.

- Stop learners immediately after an error. Show them what to do and provide them an opportunity to do it correctly (“That word is trouble. What word is this?”). Try not to use the word “no.”

Be precise.

- Provide clear and direct instructions (“Say this word”) rather than “Would you say it?”

Be mindful of mistakes made during the session.

- Record learner performance. Review anything that learners miss. Remember, learners “should say it like they know it.”

Be diligent.

- Work from the beginning to the end of the tutoring session.

Be innovative.

- Keep tutoring sessions lively and dynamic.

Be focused.

- Try to ignore minor misbehavior. Only recognize good behavior.

Be patient.

- Show learners that you care about them through your commitment and encouragement.

Be on time.

- Arrive at least 15 minutes before the tutoring session begins. Make sure plans for the session and materials are ready so the session may begin as soon as the student arrives.

Be committed.

- Once you have begun to tutor a student, remain with that student throughout the year.

Be results-oriented.

- Gather learner performance data on a daily basis, and chart the data (using graphs, stars, etc.) to allow a visual display of improvements made in the program.

The No Child Left Behind Act, signed into law by President Bush, opened a new era in American education. The act contains the president’s four basic education reform principles: stronger accountability for results; increased flexibility and local control; expanded options for parents, including supplemental services for children in low-performing schools; and an emphasis on teaching methods that have been proven to work. No Child Left Behind provides nearly a billion dollars in funding for the promotion of scientifically based reading instruction through its Reading First and Early Reading First programs.
