SUBJECT: MARILYN MONROE [REDACTED]

The following information was received from [REDACTED] who have furnished reliable information in the past, on 2/28/62. Extreme care should be used in reporting any of this information to avoid disclosure of sources who were associating closely with subject during her visit to Mexico.

This source advised that MARILYN MONROE, the movie actress, was recently in Mexico on vacation and while in Mexico associated closely with certain members of the American Communist Group in Mexico (ACGM). Source characterized the ACGM as a loose association of a predominantly social nature of present and/or past members of the Communist Party, USA, and their friends and associates who share a common sympathy for Communism and the Soviet Union.

They advised that during the course of this visit a mutual infatuation arose between subject and [REDACTED]. This situation caused considerable dismay among Miss MONROE's entourage and also among the ACGM.
On 2/21/62, [redacted] visited subject in her suite ([110]) at the Hotel Continental Hilton at 5:00 P.M. The visit was arranged through New York friends and was based on his former friendship with ARTHUR MILLER, her former husband. He stayed about an hour and she agreed to go with [redacted] on 2/23/62 to Toluca, Mexico, for the day.

Subject arrived in Mexico on 2/19/62 from Miami. Her entry into Mexico reportedly was arranged by FRANK SINATRA through former President MIGUEL ALEMAN. She was accompanied by an agent, a hair dresser, and an interior decorator. The latter was identified as EUNICE CHURCHILL, a widow about 65 from Los Angeles. CHURCHILL said her husband was a violent trade unionist who was a functionary in the furniture workers section of the AF of L Carpenters Union who died four or five years ago. She identified him as a labor pioneer but did not identify him as a leftist. She is a part time interior decorator and also claims to be an assistant of Dr. WEXLEY, subject's analyst.

According to CHURCHILL, the subject was much disturbed by ARTHUR MILLER's marriage on 2/20/62 and feels like a "negated sex symbol." CHURCHILL said that subject "has a lot of leftist rubbed off from MILLER." Subject reportedly spent some time with ROBERT KENNEDY at the home of the PETER LAWFORDs in Hollywood. Subject reportedly challenged Mr. KENNEDY on some points proposed to her by MILLER.

Subject was acquainted with [redacted] background and principles and expressed curiosity as to his relationship with the [redacted] family.

On 2/24/62, subject traveled to Toluca, Mexico, to visit the native market. She was accompanied by [redacted] and [redacted] Later they returned to the home and were joined by [redacted] and her husband [redacted].

It became clear that a relationship was developing between subject and [redacted] and considerable concern was expressed.
over this by various members of the ACMM, such as [Redacted] and [Redacted]. [Redacted] was completely infatuated with MONROE. She was very concerned for [Redacted] who was excluded from a meeting of [Redacted] on the night of 2/23/62.

On 2/25/62, EUNICE CHURCHILL said that Dr. WEXLEY did not like what was happening in the relationship between subject and [Redacted] and said that subject must get out with other people at once. She said subject is very vulnerable now because of her rejection by ARTHUR MILLER and also by JOE Di MAGGIO and FRANK SINATRA. She telephoned SINATRA to come and comfort her and he would not do it.

On the night of 2/24/62, she went with [Redacted] to a party at the home of EMILIO FERNANDEZ.

On 2/25/62, the subject had a date with [Redacted] to view the movie "TORRERO" and go out with him afterwards; however, five minutes before he was to get her, she called and canceled the date and [Redacted] was furious.

EUNICE CHURCHILL continued to express concern over subject's increasing dependence on [Redacted].

On 2/27/62, subject attended a reception for Princess ANTONIO DE BRAGANZA, the infanta of Portugal. This was given at the home of DENNIS BOURKE and was attended by members of the staffs of various embassies and was completely nonpolitical in nature.

It is noted that throughout the evening she expressed considerable curiosity about FIELD.

On 2/28/62, subject was to leave on a two-day trip to Taxco, Mexico, accompanied by [Redacted] and his wife [Redacted].
said it was obvious that the subject was completely enamored with [REDACTED]. She said that subject thinks [REDACTED] is rich, stable, intellectual, and dependable. She said the situation is very hard on [REDACTED] [\(&\)]

Mexico City newspapers reported subject left 3/2/62 en route to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Information copies of this communication are being directed to Los Angeles and New York as it contains information on activities of possible interest to those Divisions.

SUBJECT: "PHOTOPLAY" ARTICLE CONCERNING MARILYN MONROE'S DEATH

Walter Winchell's column in the July 8, 1963, issue of the "New York Mirror" contained the statement, "Photoplay's current article on the man who 'killed' Marilyn practically names him."

In accordance with your request, there follows a brief review of the information concerning Marilyn Monroe in the August, 1963, issue of "Photoplay" magazine. On page 10, a column by Winchell begins which states that Marilyn Monroe's death "and the married man responsible for it" was still getting considerable space in the foreign press. Winchell says the author of the articles, which are syndicated in papers on the Continent, claims he personally interviewed many people in Hollywood and New York who were aware of Miss Monroe's problems and claimed his sensational story was "big news." The "big news," according to Winchell, was the name of the "married man" involved. Winchell says "many of us" on the papers and in the magazines have hinted at the name, and the foreign correspondent has jumped to conclusions. Winchell says there is no proof that the married man was the villain, but many of Miss Monroe's friends now believe the overdose of sleeping pills was an accident. Winchell claims much of the foreign correspondent's story was recognized by him as having appeared in "Photoplay" and in the Hearst newspapers for which Winchell writes.

The article concerning Miss Monroe begins on page 52 under the caption, "One Year Later Marilyn Monroe's Killer Still At Large!" A review of this article reveals Winchell's claim that it practically names the man who "killed" Marilyn is nothing more than a plug for a cheap magazine. Actually, the article comes nowhere near identifying anyone. The only "clues" to the identity of the alleged married man who had an affair with Marilyn and "caused" her suicide when he rejected her could apply to any number of prominent individuals.

These "clues" are: that the man is happily married and has children; that you can see him in a crowd and reach out and touch him; that he is a great man, famous, known the world over; that he can be seen on television and in movie theaters; that people look up to him and consider his wife and children lucky; that he is mentioned almost daily in newspapers and magazines; and that he is considered a "truly honorable man."

ENCLO. BEHIND FILE

M. A. Jones to DeLoach memo
RE: "PHOTOPLAY" ARTICLE CONCERNING MARILYN MONROE'S DEATH

The article alleges the affair between this man and Miss Monroe began during the "worst time of her life and the best time of his." The alleged man was celebrating his good fortune in reaching a height in his career "he never before dreamed" would be possible. The remainder of the article allegedly outlines the end of the romance and Miss Monroe's final efforts to renew the relationship. The article states that she telephoned the man on Sunday night, August 5, 1962, and when he said he would not leave his wife and could not see Miss Monroe "any more," she swallowed a "handful" of sleeping pills. The article claims she later called the man again, implying that she told him of having taken the pills, only to have him hang up on her and states that the last sound she heard was the "buzzing of the receiver in her hand." after the man broke the telephone connection.

The article states that Miss Monroe's housekeeper has "vanished" and that her publicity agent, Pat Newcombe, is now working in Washington, D. C. It says her second husband, Joe DiMaggio, is the only one who remains faithful and that the man who killed Miss Monroe is still at large and can never be arrested. But, the article asserts, "Wherever he goes, whatever he touches, whomever he sees; he thinks of Marilyn. His guilt never leaves him, his fear has become his friend."

The Denver Post reports that Dixie is building a sub base in Alabama, the site of the aircraft squadron of the 9th Air Force. The exact location is a matter of speculation. A CIA official said it was believed that the mission, nicknamed Kirshenblaton, was being moved from its present site in Alabama. The mission, it was noted, will be the mission's first to be located in Alabama. The move was said to be part of the effort to expand the mission's capabilities and to better meet the demands of the war. You can see him in a crowd. You can reach out and touch him; because he is a great man, famous, known all over the world, and maybe that touch will give you at least a small part of him....You can see him on television—or even in a movie theater—and you will look up to him and think how lucky his wife is to be married to him and how lucky his children are to have him for a father. And maybe you'll think, "I wish I were his wife."...You can read about him almost any day in the newspapers and magazines, and you will think, "This is a good person. This is a truly honorable man."...But what you will never read, never see, never know is that this man is a killer. He is the man who killed Marilyn Monroe....When their romance began, nobody—especially Marilyn and the man—could have guessed at the ending. For it began with a kind of love....It was the worst time of her life and the best time of his, and so each of them needed someone to share that time with. That was their love, their need, really. It was a kind of love gone wrong. For he is very much happily married. Marilyn, of course knew that. He had no intention of ever divorcing his wife. She knew that, too. But he had been so on top of the. (Continued on page 74) trouble with the law over Cohen. She was applying for a role in "The Untouchables," ironically. She brought along one of her past—a painting by herself. Quite a talent.

I have a letter from one of her teenage daughters about her mother's release from prison. In it she reminds her mother that she was once chosen as the girl who most looked like Marilyn Monroe. It was a national contest headed by 20th Century-Fox. Liz and Marilyn were born the same year, too.

The daughter says her mother will shortly have a book published. It is titled "Debt of Honor." In it she writes: "I know what I did was wrong, but what else could I do? Can you hurt a man who helped you when you needed it most? Can you then turn your back on him? When you see him with his back to the wall? It was forced to choose between the lesser of two evils. There was no way to win."

At the prison gate when Liz Renay comes out she will be greeted by her daughter, Brenda, and husband and their babies—born while young Grandma was paying her Debt of Honor.

Pravda ran an article bylined by Negro opera critic Paul Robeson. It told: "Negroes cannot live like the white ones. The police and the government are oppressive and vicious."

world at that time that he had to have a celebration of his good fortune. His career had reached such heights that he had dreamed it would, and there were obviously better, much better things in store for him. And what better celebration than to have the world's most desirable desire symbol in love with him?

With Marilyn being a not-so-good fortune but unhappiness that drew her to him. She was getting older, she was afraid she was losing her beauty, she was afraid she'd lose out on her career. Her last pictures had not made the money she expected of a Monroe movie—and if she couldn't make money for the producers, who would hire her. And hadn't 20th just fired her?

Most of all, she had never found the love she'd been looking for, the love that was going to make her forget all her past unhappiness, the love that would make her world a beautiful place.

So she went on looking. And not finding, she became more and more desperate. And with her desperation came the endless pill, the drinking, and a dream she'd had before—the dream of ending it all in dying.

And then there was the man.

She needed him. She needed his confidence and his vitality. Because if this man was so confident of himself and of his future, and since he'd chosen her, didn't that mean he loved her, too? And if he believed in her, then she couldn't possibly be as bad as she thought she was. Maybe he would marry her.

Besides, to her, there was always the faint possibility that he would marry her and they could live happily ever after. But it was all a dream, a dream that sometimes she would try to believe that everything would turn out all right. There was a chance that he'd never marry her. He loved his wife, he told her, though she loved him, too. And there was his career, he told her, any scandal would ruin it—and he'd never allow that to happen. This was the reason he'd dedicated his life to. No, he'd never allow that to happen.

And so they spent time together, as much time as they could manage, in quiet, out of the way places, at her home, in friends' apartments. And so they were together, and the man's conscience began to bother him. Some people knew about their romance, could his wife find out? What would she do—would she leave him?

And, if it became public knowledge, what would happen to his work? Would he be bashed by scandal just when his life's dream was close to the brink of coming true? He'd better try to stop seeing her altogether.

And the more he tried to stop seeing her, the more desperate Marilyn became. There were the phone calls, the threats, the pills again.

He didn't believe her, all she did was make him almost hate her.

Finally, on a Sunday night August 5, 1962, Marilyn tried again.

She spoke to him on the phone. "Don't leave me," she pleaded.

"It's over," he answered. "I'll never leave my wife. I can't see you any more."

He hung up on her and she tried to lose herself in sleep. Beside her bed there was a bottle of fifty sleep capsules. There was her friend, the thing that always gave her peace.

She gulped down a handful. The phone rang. It was a close friend of hers, a friend who knew all about the romance.

"He won't take me back," she cried.

"He said he'll never come back."

The friend told her, "I'll come over and talk to you."

But Marilyn didn't want anyone to see her the way she looked. Her eyes were swollen and red. She'd let her blonde hair grow out until the dark roots showed. Her face clearly showed the signs of drinking and pills.

"No," she said, "I've taken a sleeping pill. I'll just go to sleep."

But she couldn't sleep—and next to her was the bottle of pills. If she could a soundtrack her voice was the sum: $234.

Movie people and others in show business recently back from The Old Country brought back this enlightening bit:

That Princess Soraya "over did things" with her ex-husband, the Shah of Iran, when she announced plans for a film debut on the anniversary of their divorce. It was in March, 1958, that Soraya was exiled from Iran. The deal to make a movie with producer Lassard was announced in Rome, March 16, 1963.

Her friends also spread the "news" that Soraya is convinced she was divorced not because she couldn't bear children—though she had four—but because the Shah fell out of love with her. Doctors, they added, assured Soraya that a minor operation would enable her to become a mother.

* Long Deep Sigh Dept.: We note that Maureen O’Hara’s beautiful eighteen-year-old daughter Bronwyn appears with Maureen in Warner’s epic “Spencer’s Mountain.” O, dear. It seems like only a few months after that Charles Laughton presented the eighteen-year-old Maureen in “Jamaica Inn.”

* Some Hollywood folks are still upset over Hedda Hopper’s book which “tells all.” One actress complained: “Imagine writing our memoirs instead of her own!”

... and, if it became public knowledge, what would happen to his work? Would he be besmirched by scandal just when his life’s dream was close to the brink of coming true? He’d better see Marilyn less. He’d better try to stop seeing her altogether. And the more he tried to stop seeing her, the more desperate Marilyn became. There were the phone calls, the threats, the pills again.

He didn’t believe her; all she did was make him almost hate her. Finally, on Sunday night, August 5, 1962, Marilyn tried again.

She spoke to him on the phone. “Don’t leave me,” she pleaded. “It’s over,” he answered. “I’ll never leave your wife. I can’t see you any more.” But he hung on and she tried to lose herself in sleep. Beside her bed there was a bottle of fifty sleep capsules. There, there was her friend, the thing that always gave her peace.

She gulped down a handful. The phone rang. It was a close friend of hers, a friend who knew all about the knowledge.

“Hi won’t take me back,” she cried. “He said he’ll never come back.”

The friend told her, “I’ll come over and talk to you.”

But Marilyn didn’t want anyone to see her the way she looked. Her hair was swept and red. She’d let her blonde hair grow out until the dark roots showed. Her face clearly showed the signs of drinking and pills.

“No,” she said. “I’ve taken a sleeping pill, I’ll just go to sleep.”

But she couldn’t sleep—and next to sleep, she would feel better. She wouldn’t dream about her career, her fame. But she had no career. Her studio had fired her. Well, she could dream that somebody loved her. She didn’t forget about her father who never wanted her, her mother who escaped to mental institutions. And she could forget this man who had left her, too. If she could only sleep. And next to the bottle was the bottle of pills.

The bottle. It was empty! There were none left.

She had to get help! She called him.

Maybe she’s faking ...

First, he thought: If this gets out I’m through. I can’t get involved in something like this. Then, She’s faking. She’s threatened me before. She’d never really do it.

He told her again he couldn’t get involved—that he was a married man. He had kids.

It all took less than a minute.

The last thing Marilyn heard was the buzzing of the telephone in her hand.

Coroner Theodore J. Curphey, in his official report, noted: “Miss Monroe had been discovered to be up, to withdraw, and to die.” On more than one occasion in the past, when disappointed and depressed, she had made suicide attempts by using sedatives or drugs. On these occasions she had called for help and had been rescued.

This time she had not been rescued.

It was her housekeeper, Mrs. Eunice Murray, who first sensed that something was wrong. The light in Marilyn’s bedroom was still burning at three that morning. She knocked. There was no answer. She tried the door. It was locked.

She called Marilyn’s psychiatrist, Dr. Ralph Greenson. He hurried over and broke in the window. When he found her, she was dead. The telephone was still buzzing in her hand.

Now it is a year later. Mrs. Murray has found another Miss Monroe who vanished shortly after Marilyn’s death. Pat Newcombe, Marilyn’s publicity agent, has left the Hollywood scene. And now, in Washington, D.C., Joe DiMaggio, her second husband, has remained faithful to her memory—ever so slightly. He has a small bouquet of roses placed on her crypt every week.

But he is not the only one who is faithful to Marilyn. The man who killed Marilyn. He is the man they cannot arrest. He is the man who is still at large. He is the man who is living the death she so quickly found.

We have lost him, but so has he.

Wherever he goes; wherever he touches, whoever he sees; be thinks of Marilyn. His guilt never leaves him, his fear he has become his friend. For once, long ago, before all this, he was an honorable man. But he had made a fatal mistake. And now he is lost—not to the world—but to himself.

Some people know who he is. Will they ever reveal it publicly? Does his wife know? Would she tell? And he himself, will his guilt pry his tongue loose? You can ask him. You can reach out and touch him. . . . And you will never know that he is the man who killed Marilyn Monroe.

And he is the man who killed himself.

Dear Sir:

Having attended the All American Conference to Combat Communism as a delegate of Mothers of World War II, Inc. I now feel it my duty, more than ever, to do what I can to suppress untrue rumors.

Am in a trailer park in Winter Haven, Fla. and I was handed a pamphlet entitled "Suicide or Murder?" pertaining to the death of Marilyn Monroe and connecting her name with the former Attorney General. Such reading can do much to undermine one's character and I would like to know if there is any truth to any of it. It mentions Communism also and that is why I am interested.

Would appreciate an answer. I am Americanism Chairman also for the organization (M.W.W.II, Inc.) and am interested in clearing this up.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Alta Melton

Dear Mrs. Melton:

Your letter of January 30th has been received.

While I would like to be of assistance to you, the FBI is strictly an investigative agency of the Federal Government and neither makes evaluations nor draws conclusions as to the character or integrity of any organization, publication or individual. In view of this, I am sure you will understand why I cannot comment concerning the pamphlet, "Suicide or Murder?"

I am enclosing some information which I hope you will find of interest.

Sincerely yours,

F. Edgar Humes

Dear Director Hoover!

Austrian papers recently reported, often in headlines, that the FBI is presently engaged in investigating the death of Marilyn Monroe, for there have allegedly arisen doubts as to the fact that the actress has committed suicide. We wonder if these reports are based upon true facts.

Christmas and the coming of a new year is a welcome opportunity to thank you, Dear Director Hoover, for your never-ceasing kindness to answer our frequent inquiries whenever possible. In doing so you are decisively contributing not only to hold but to improve the prestige and the standard of our review. A very happy Christmas and every good wish for 1966!

I have the honor to be, Sir,

yours most respectfully

To advise of speculation concerning FBI complicity in the death of Marilyn Monroe propounded by author Norman Mailer in his soon-to-be-published biography of the deceased actress.

"Marilyn," a 270-page biography (New York; Grosset and Dunlap,) priced at $19.95, is scheduled for publication on 8/1/73. It reportedly has a first American printing of 285,000 copies and is the August selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club.

Following Miss Monroe's death by drug overdose in 1962, there was a spate of rumors, originating on the West Coast, alleging she was having an affair with the then Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, and that her death was in some way related to this and/or was the result of a plot revolving around some of her associates who allegedly had past Communist Party affiliations or sympathies. These rumors were embellished upon at that time in various sensational-type gossip magazines and in a short book published in July, 1964, entitled "The Strange Death of Marilyn Monroe" by Frank A. Capell. These allegations were branded false and no factual support existed for them.

Mailer, in his new book, has repeated some of these same rumors and has given them a bizarre twist.

As to whether Miss Monroe took her own life, Mailer answers "possibly" - and then suggests other possibilities. One of these is the suggestion that the FBI, CIA or the Mafia found it of interest that Robert Kennedy, brother of the President John Kennedy, was reputed to be having an affair with the movie star. Mailer suggests that "right-wing" FBI and CIA Agents had a "huge motivation" to murder Marilyn Monroe in order to embarrass the Kennedy family, claiming the FBI and CIA were furious with the Kennedys because following the Bay of Pigs invasion President Kennedy was moving to limit the power of these agencies.
Memorandum to Mr. E. S. Miller
Re: Norman Mailer

Mailer has admitted in recent press interviews concerning his book that he has no evidence to support his theory and that it is based on his "writer's instinct" and on speculation.

A second allegation purportedly contained in the book was recently brought to the attention of the Los Angeles Office by Lloyd Shearer, editor of Parade Magazine. This allegation is that in 1962 FBI Agents in Los Angeles went to the telephone company in Santa Monica, California, and removed a "paper tape" of Marilyn Monroe's telephone calls, some of which according to Mailer, were presumably to the White House or White House staff on the night of her death.

This is false and neither the files of the Los Angeles Office nor FBI Headquarters indicate the existence of any such tapes. This again appears to be a variation of a spurious charge contained in Capell's 1964 book in which he alleged that such tapes were in the custody of the Los Angeles Police Department.

He admits to little or no research concerning his speculation about Marilyn Monroe's death. He states his motive in writing the book is his dire need for money. He admits having no evidence to support his theory of FBI or CIA involvement and uses it to sensationalize his book and to gain publicity. Mailer has even coined a new word which describes some of his speculative writing in "Marilyn." The "Tactoid" he defines as "an event which has no existence other than it has appeared in print."

Re: Norman Mailer

A review in Time Magazine on 7/16/73, a Mike Wallace television interview, a 7/22/73 New York Times book review by Pauline Kael, and a Washington Post article dated 7/30/73 by Stephen Issacs, are all critical of Mailer for his unsubstantiated theorising and for engaging in "yellow" journalism.

ACTION:

For information only. No action is recommended regarding Mailer's allegations. Any public statements by the FBI would merely serve to feed the fires of publicity which Mailer is attempting to stoke.
